For Immediate release.

It is not every storm that comes to destroy. Some come to clear the path and its obstructive underbrush, and the quiet after the storm allow for the renewal and regeneration of spirit and form. The verdict of a justifiably angered nation has been visited upon us. We have heard it loud and clear. We have been duly chastened.

✓ Now is the time for sober reflection.

✓ Now is the time to smoothen ruffled feathers.

✓ Now is the time to assuage wounded sentiments across the length and breadth of our party and country.

✓ Now is the time to examine ourselves to see if indeed we are true and faithful to the tenets and values of our tradition or have metamorphosed into an ugly shadow of what we ought to be.

Yes, our present predicament is going to be very trying but clarifying, and we must and shall rise to the occasion of renewing our Party.

In this, there is no doubt. More anon.

Boakye K. Agyariko.
